be short lived.

The third was halved in par 4s, after Hoffner had been considerably outdriven. All were on in 2 and took two putts. It was Hoffner who kept straight at the long fourth, 490 yards, Barnes hooking his drive to a trap and then playing his second into the rough. The Briton took four strokes before reaching the green, but here he sank a long putt for his 5. In the meantime Hagen was having his troubles, and after slicing to the rough and getting into more difficulty on his third, sank his ball for a 6. Hoffner halved is 5, with Barnes and still led the pro-terrific shots. Barnes ran down a fif-teen-foot putt for his 4. Hoffner, who had sliced his drive to the rough, came along with a 5. The score then was Hagen, 54; Barnes, 55, and Hoffner, 56. Hagen was wild on the fourteenth, and, after hooking dis drive to the rough onds apart at the finish. Commodore William B. Potts's Elf and Bertram H. Borden's Rumpus crossed the line first and second, respectively, in to-day's third race for the season's cup.

After a period early in the season in which the vicissitudes of fortune were felt, the champions have forged on to the front through sheer ability. Sick ness tore up the infield combination and relegated some of the pitchers to the reserve list. George Foster was slow in finding himself, Ernie Shore was forced to rest for a while, and the clever Jack Barry was out. Needless to say, the loss of Tris Speaker has been felt heavily. Then Duffy Lewis fell off in his work. But through it all the Red Sox were still the Red Sox, and they kept right on going.

Red Sox in the Fight.

The Red Sox proved beyond all question that they are to be reckoned with by the decisive manner in which they walloped the invading Chicago White Sox in two double-headers. Ernie Shore, George Foster, Dutch Leonard and the mighty Babe Ruth were the siege guns unloosed by Bill Carrigan, and against such hurling the pale-hosed crew wilted and passed out. It is just that pitching that is bound to count in the drive through until the cooling breezes of September afford some compensation for the out. It is just that pitching that is bound to count in the drive through until the cooling breezes of September afford some compensation for the suffering in the dog days of August.

Every last one of those red-hosed hurlers is at his best, and then there is the left-handed Carl Mays to step in at off moments and make life unbearable for the hitters. Mays has been lost in the glitter surrounding the afore-named quartet, but he is stride, and is whaling the cover off the ball when not engaged in running all over the lot to attend to those possible hits which require his attention. Clarence Walker is far from a something else which is not in accordant tion. Clarence Walker is far from a speaker, but he is a serviceable man, and neither Harry Hooper nor Olaf the Henriksen requires explanation nor defence.
